CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

At first he had expected some trick, being a person of tortuous brain; but as time went on, and nothing unexpected happened, he became assured. His orders were to follow the millionaire, and inform headquarters where he was taken to. And assuredly at the moment it seemed easy money. Then, quite suddenly, the humming stopped, and he frowned. The car in front had swung off the road, and turned through the entrance of a small airdrome. What the devil was he to do now? Most assuredly he could not pursue an airplane on a motor—even a racer. Blindly, without thinking, he did the first thing that came into his head. He left his car standing where it was, and followed the others into the airdrome on foot. Perhaps he could find out something from one of the mechanics; someone might be able to tell him where the plane was going.

There she was with the car beside her, and already the millionaire was being strapped into his seat. Drummond was talking to the pilot, and the sleuth, full of eagerness, accosted a passing mechanic.

"Can you tell me where that airplane is going to?" he asked ingratiatingly.

It was perhaps unfortunate that the said mechanic had just had a large spanner dropped on his toe, and his answer was not helpful. It was an education in one way, and at any other time the pursuer would have treated it with the respect it deserved. But, as it was, it was unfortunate that Peter Darrell should have chosen the gendarme. "You priceless little bird! My name is Captain Hugh Drummond."

And as he spoke, a man sitting close by, who had been an amused onlooker of the whole scene, stiffened suddenly in his chair and stared hard at Hugh. It was only for a second, and then he was once more merely the politely interested spectator. But Hugh had seen that quick look, though he gave no sign; and when at last the Frenchman departed, apparently satisfied, he leaned over and spoke to Jerry.

"See that man with the suit of hand-me-downs and the cigar?" he remarked. "He's in the game; I'm just wondering on which side."

He was not left long in doubt, for barely had the swing doors closed behind the gendarme, when the man in question rose and came over to him.

"Excuse me, sir," he said, in a pronounced nasal twang, "but I heard you say you were Captain Hugh Drummond. I guess you're one of the men I've come across the water to see. My card."

Hugh glanced at the pasteboard languidly.

"Mr. Jerome K. Green," he murmured. "What a jolly sort of name."

"See here, Captain," went on the other, suddenly displaying a badge hidden under his coat. "That'll put you wise. That badge is the badge of the police force of the United States of America; and that same force is humming some at the moment." He sat down beside Hugh, and bent forward confidently. "There's a prominent citizen of New York City been mislaid, Captain; and from information we've got, we reckon you know quite a lot about his whereabouts. What about Hiram C. Potts?"

"What, indeed?" remarked Hugh. "Sounds like a riddle, don't it?"

"You've heard of him, Captain?"

"Yes—but you've met him recently," said the detective, leaning forward.

"You know where he is, and"—he tapped Hugh on the knee impressively—"I want him. I want to take him back in cotton-wool to his wife and daughters. That's why I'm over on this side, Captain, just for that one purpose."

"There seem to me to be a considerable number of people wandering around who share your opinion about Mr. Potts," drawled Hugh. "He must be a popular sort of cove."

"Popular ain't the word for it, Captain," said the other. "Have you got him now?"

"In a matter of speaking, yes," answered Hugh, beckoning to a passing waiter. "Three Martinis."

"Where is he?" snapped the detective eagerly.

Hugh laughed. "Being wrapped up in cotton-wool by somebody else's wife and daughters. You were a little too quick, Mr. Green; you may be all you say—on the other hand, you may not. And these days I trust no one."

The American nodded his head in approval.

"Quite right," he remarked. "My motto—and yet I'm going to trust you. Weeks ago we heard things on the other side, through certain channels, as to a show which was on the rails over here."

Hugh nodded.

"Then Hiram Potts got mixed up in it; exactly how, we weren't wise to. But it was enough to bring me over here. Two days ago I got this cable." He produced a bundle of papers, and handed one to Drummond. "It's in cipher, as you see; I've put the translation underneath."

Hugh took the cablegram and glanced at it. It was short and to the point:

"Captain Hugh Drummond, of Half Moon street, London, is your man." He glanced up at the American, who drained his cocktail with the air of a man who is satisfied with life.

"Captain Hugh Drummond of Half Moon street, London, is my man," he chuckled. "Well, Captain, what about it now? Will you tell me why you've come to Paris? I guess it's something to do with the business I'm on."

For a few moments Hugh did not reply, and the American seemed in no hurry for an answer. Some early arrivals for dinner sauntered through the lounge and Drummond watched them idly as they passed. The American detective certainly seemed all right, but, as he casually, his glance rested on a man sitting just opposite, reading the paper. He took in the short, dark beard—the immaculate, though slightly foreign evening clothes; evidently a wealthy Frenchman giving a dinner party in the restaurant by the way the head waiter was hovering around. And then suddenly his eyes narrowed, and he sat motionless.

"Are you interested in the psychology of gambling, Mr. Green?" he remarked, turning to the somewhat astonished American. "Some people cannot control their eyes or their mouth if the stakes are big; others cannot control their hands. For instance, the gentleman opposite. Does anything strike you particularly with regard to him?"

The detective glanced across the lounge.

"He seems to like hitting his knee with his left hand," he said, after a short inspection.

"Precisely," murmured Hugh. "That is why I came to Paris."

CHAPTER IX.

In Which He Has a Near Shave.

ONE.

"Captain, you have me guessing," the American bit the end off another cigar, and leaned back in his chair.

"You say that swell Frenchman with the walters hovering about like fleas round a dog's tail is the reason you came to Paris. Is he kind of friendly with Hiram C. Potts?"

Drummond laughed. "The first time I met Mr. Potts," he remarked, "that swell Frenchman was just preparing to put a thumb-screw on his second thumb."

"Second?" The detective looked up quickly. "The first had been treated earlier in the evening," answered Drummond quietly. "It was then that I removed your millionaire pal."

The other lit his cigar deliberately. "Say, Captain," he murmured, "you ain't pulling my leg by any chance, are you?"

"I am not," said Drummond shortly. "I was told, before I met him, that the gentleman over there was one of the boys. . . . He is, most distinctly. In fact, he is using to date such matters have not been much in my line. I should put him down as a sort of super-criminal. I wonder what name he is passing under here?"

The American ceased pulling at his cigar.

"Do they vary?"

"In England he is clean-shaven, possesses a daughter, and answers to Carl Peterson. As he is at present I should never have known him, but for that little trick of his."

"Possesses a daughter!" For the first time the detective displayed traces of excitement. "Holy Smoke! It can't be him!"

"Who?" demanded Drummond. Out of the corner of his eye he was watching three men who had just joined the subject of their talk, and on his face was a dawning amazement. He waited till the whole party had gone into the restaurant, then, throwing aside his caution, he turned excitedly on Drummond.

"Are you certain," he cried, "that that's the man who has been monkeying with Potts?"

"Absolutely," said Hugh. "He recognized me; whether he thinks I recognized him or not, I don't know."

"Then what," remarked the detective, "is he doing here dining with Hocking, our cotton trust man; with Steinemann, the German coal man; and with that other guy whose face is familiar, but whose name I can't place? Two of 'em at any rate, Captain, have got more millions than we're ever likely to have thousands."

Hugh stared at the American. "Last night," he said slowly, "he was foregathered with a crowd of the most atrocious ragged-trousered revolutionaries it's ever been my luck to run up against."

"We're in it, Captain, right in the middle of it," cried the detective, slapping his leg. "I'll eat my hat if that Frenchman isn't Franklin—or Libstein—or Baron Darrott—or any other of the blamed names he calls himself. He's a genius; he's the goods. Gee!"

"If we could only lay him by the heels."

For a while he stared in front of him, lost in his dream of pleasant anticipation; then, with a short laugh, he pulled himself together.

"Quite a few people have thought the same, Captain," he remarked, "and there he is—still drinking highballs."

"You say he was with a crowd of revolutionaries last night. What do you mean exactly?"

"Bolsheviks, Anarchists, members of the Do-no-work-and-have-all-the-England," answered Hugh, still grinning. "We may be crude in our methods, Mr. Green, but you must admit we do our best. Incidentally, if you want to know, your friend Mr. Potts is at present tucked between the sheets at that very house. He went there by airplane this morning."

He waved a hand toward Jerry. "He was the pilot."

The American was shaking his head a little dazedly. "We've got to get busy on what your friend Peterson's little worry is; we've then got to stop it—some old how. Now, does nothing sort of strike you?" He looked keenly at the soldier. "Revolutionaries, Bolsheviks, paid agitators last night; international financiers this evening. Why, the broad outline of the plan is as plain as the nose on your face; and it's just the sort of game that man would love. . . ."

The detective stared thoughtfully at the end of his cigar, and a look of comprehension began to dawn on Hugh's face.

"Great Scott! Mr. Green," he said, "I'm beginning to get you. What was defeating me was, why two men like Peterson and Lakington should be mixed up with last night's crowd."

"Lakington! Who's Lakington?" asked the other quickly.

"Number Two in the combine," said Hugh, "and a nasty man."

"Well, we'll leave him out for the moment," said the American. "Doesn't it strike you that there are quite a number of people in this world who would benefit if England became a sort of second Russia? That such a thing would be worth money—big money? That such a thing would be worth paying through the nose for? It would have to be done properly; your small strike here, and your small strike there, ain't no manner of use. One gigantic syndicalist strike all over your country—that's what Peterson's playing for, I'll stake my bottom dollar. How he's doing it is another matter. But he's in with the big financiers; and he's using the tub-thumping Bolsheviks as tools. Gad! It's a big scheme!" he puffed twice at his cigar—"a damned big scheme. Your little old country, Captain, is saving one, the finest on God's earth; but she's in a funny mood. She's sick, like most of us; maybe she's a little bit sicker than a good many people think. But I reckon Peterson's cure won't do any manner of good, excepting to himself and those blamed capitalists who are putting up the dollars."

"Then where the devil does Potts come in," said Hugh, who had listened intently to every word the American had said. "And the duchess of Lampshire's pearls?"

"Pearls!" began the American, when the restaurant door opened suddenly and Ted Jerminham emerged. He seemed to be in a hurry, and Hugh half rose in his chair. Then he sat back again, as with miraculous rapidity a crowd of infuriated head waiters and other great ones appeared from nowhere and surrounded Jerminham.

Undoubtedly this was not the way for a waiter to leave the hotel—even if he had just been discovered as an impostor and sacked on the spot. And undoubtedly if he had been a waiter, this large body of scandalized beings would have removed him expeditiously through some secret buttery-hatch, and dropped him on the pavement out of a back entrance.

Just opposite Hugh he halted, and in a clear voice addressed no one in particular:

"You're spotted. Look out. Ledger at Godalming."

Then, engorged once more in the crowd, he continued his majestic progress, and finally disappeared a little abruptly from view.

"Cryptic," murmured the American, "but some lad, Gee! He had that bunch guessing."

"The ledger at Godalming," said Hugh thoughtfully. "I watched Peterson, through the skylight last night, getting gay with that ledger. I'm thinking we'll have to look inside it. Mr. Green. What about a little dinner at Maxim's? I'm thinking we've found out all we're likely to find, until we can get to that ledger. And thanks to your knowing those birds, Mr. Green, our trip to Paris has been of considerable value."

The American nodded.

"I guess I'm on," he remarked slowly, "but if you take my advice, Captain, you'll look nippy tonight. I wouldn't linger around corners admiring the mind. Things kind o' happen at corners."

TWO.

"Righto, Old Bean!" returned the waiter, "but don't hope for too much."

money brigade," answered Hugh. "But excuse me a moment. Waiter." A man who had been hovering round came up promptly.

"Four of 'em, Ted," said Hugh in a rapid undertone. "Frenchman with a beard, a Yank, and two Boches. Do your best."

"Right-o, old bean!" returned the waiter, "but don't hope for too much." He disappeared unobtrusively into the restaurant, and Hugh turned with a laugh to the American, who was staring at him in amazement.

"Who the devil is that guy?" asked the detective.

"Ted Jerminham—son of Sir Patrick Jerminham, Bart., and Lady Jerminham, of Jerminham hall, Rutland, in case of emergency, he was thinking of the detective's words. Getting hold of the ledger was not going to be easy—far from it; but the excitement of the chase had fairly obsessed him by now. He lay in bed, turning over in his mind every possible and impossible scheme by which he could get into the secret center room at The Elms. He knew the safe the ledger was kept in; but safes are awkward propositions for the ordinary mortal to tackle. Anyway, it wasn't a thing which could be done in a minute's visit; he would have to manage at least a quarter or half an hour's undisturbed search, the thought of which, with his knowledge of the habits of the household, almost made him laugh out loud. And, at that moment, a fly pinged past his head. . . .

GIANT TREES OF AUSTRALIA

Exceed in Height, Though Not in Circumference, the Famous Grand Conifers of California.

In the book, "Under the Southern Cross," written by Maturin M. Ballou, an American traveler, in the '80s of the last century, we read of his estimate of the great trees of Australia, according to the Christian Science Monitor.

"It is in this colony of Australia that the traveler finds the giant trees, considered to be one of the great wonders of our times, and which exceed in dimensions those grand conifers of California in which Americans feel such pride. These big trees of Victoria are called the mountain ash, though why so named we do not understand, as they are not of that family. But they are certainly the tallest trees in the known world, often measuring 400 feet and more in height, and from fifty to sixty feet in girth a couple of yards from the ground. When we say that these trees exceed in dimensions those of California we refer especially to their height inasmuch as the American trees equal them, if they do not in some instances surpass them in circumference. The Australian trees rise a hundred feet more or less from the roots without putting forth a lateral branch. On beholding them one is not at first impressed by their exceptional size or monarchlike appearance, but they grow upon one by further observation. A trip of a hundred miles from Melbourne due east to Sale—a remarkably pleasant town, of between 3,000 and 4,000 inhabitants, situated on the Gippsland railroad—takes one to the region where these immense forest giants are to be seen, and at the same time introduces the traveler to some of the finest scenery in the mountain range of this district."

Cancer on Scar of a Burn.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Society of Medicine in London, Dr. W. G. Spencer showed a case of skin cancer on the site of the scar of an X-ray burn. The woman had had a hairy mole on her left temple destroyed by monthly exposures to X-rays for two years. The scar had remained sound for eight years, but three months ago an epithelioma had appeared and had infiltrated the eyelids.

Doctor Spencer condemned a treatment which left a burnlike scar in a case which could just as easily have been treated by the knife.

France's First "Zoo."

The "Menagerie du Parc" at Versailles, founded by Louis XIV, received many animals from Cairo. It was maintained for over a century, during that time furnishing valuable material to French anatomists and naturalists. "Gradually it decayed and in 1789 was almost extinguished by the mob. The Paris museum of natural history was re-established by law in 1793 and Buffon's idea of attaching a menagerie was carried out. The latter still survives as the collection in the Jardin des Plantes.

OLD LEGEND OF MANDALAY

Fanciful Story Which Accounts for the Dogfish Being Held Sacred in that Country.

Dogfish are held sacred in Mandalay for a very picturesque and romantic reason, which goes back a long way in history. The legend of the sacred fish is that once upon a time a king of Pagan wed a Shan princess, who had an earring in which was set a relic of Buddha. All went well with their romance for a while. Finally the king tired of her, and seeing that the relic was shining unnaturally, and being superstitious, he labeled his wife a witch and cast her out.

Returning to her home, she made up her mind to dispose of the relic, which she blamed for her misfortune. When near Shweyazan she decided to bury it, and erected a pagoda over it, thus converting the place into a shrine.

Some years later the king was notified that large fish congregated near this spot, on the Myittha river, at certain seasons of the year. The fish, it was found, would come up to be fed by hand. He caused his minister to put gold leaf on the fishes' heads. Once, after doing this, the minister had to go to Bhamo, and to his surprise he saw some of the same fish with the gold leaf on their heads, at a pagoda festival in the Irrawaddy river. On his return he notified the king, who in turn made the pagoda at Shweyazan, which had attracted the fish, a sacred place. Since then the dogfish have been treated as sacred.

Embarrassing Situation.

My most embarrassing situation happened when I was a young girl. Our Sunday school gave a picnic in the woods and I attended, wearing a white dress, and carrying a green silk parasol. Unfortunately, a rain came up and after it was over my dress was as green as my parasol.—Chicago Journal.

Worthiness.

A man can bear a world's contempt when he has that within him which says he's worthy.—Alexander Smith.

MUST BE AMERICAN-MANNED

IN a recent address to the Senate on the merchant marine situation, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, advanced the proposition, among others, that "we can never have an American merchant marine unless we can attract to the marine service and retain in it genuine American seamen and officers to man and operate the ships." Discussing that proposition he said:

"Not only does the history of every maritime power in the world prove its truth but the manifest purpose of every country in the world to-day, except the United States, with any maritime pretensions, to man its merchant ships with its own citizens shows how universally the truth of the proposition I have just stated is recognized by the maritime nations of the world. What good would a fleet of even 10,000 merchant ships have been to us during the late war if they had been manned by the nationals of some other country—possibly alien enemies. Such a fleet would have been a liability and not an asset, at least until such time as we could have trained up American seamen and officers to operate the ships, and this would have been a work of months or years. Even in time of peace we could not maintain American ships manned and operated by foreign seamen. The interests of such seamen would be foreign. If they were able to save a little money they would leave the service and return to their native land. Seamen are not made in a day or a month, but it is a process of years and means years spent on board ship. The officers necessary to navigate American ships could never be obtained except from American crews."

SIMMONS ESTOPPED

ONE of the strongest supporters of the farmers' aid bill was Senator Simmons, Democratic leader of the Senate. Simmons is not only an uncompromising Democrat, but a Southerner. In his speech supporting the bill, he said, "There is nothing in the world to-day in which I am more interested than in relieving the situation which I know my people are in. My sole purpose is to get legislation here which will accomplish the object I have in view, and I am going to vote without reference to party or without reference to personalities." When Mr. Simmons thus heartily commends the Republican measure for relief of the farmers, he will scarcely be in a position to criticize his constituents if they also "vote without reference to party."

A MATTER OF COMPROMISE

IT is to be expected that there will be many changes in the tariff bill in the Senate. Such was the purpose of the founders of our form of government when they provided two houses of Congress. After the tariff bill or any other bill has been formulated and discussed and amended in one house, it goes to the other, after having been printed and made available for the perusal of the public. Many people will have suggestions to make, with the result that the measure can be much improved before final passage. Legislative business could be greatly expedited if there were only one House of Congress, but the speed would be at the sacrifice of quality.

Cause of Appendicitis

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

Hunger, The Best Sauce

Sauce is used to create an appetite or relish for the food. The right way is to look to your digestion. When you have good digestion you are certain to relish your food. Chamberlain's Tablets improve the digestion, create a healthy appetite and cause a gentle movement of the bowels.

The Fight for the Registry

By FREDERICK CLARKE

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"You did us a good turn once, Doc. We intend to return the compliment." Young Dr. Hector Fairbanks smiled pleasantly but inquiringly—in fact, almost suspiciously. The speaker was Dan Rabbitt. As he stood garbed in his rube Tennessee mountaineer's costume, two holsters at his belt, strength, independence and grit showing in every strong lineament of his face, the doctor did not marvel that he had been made the leader of the famous "Midnight Riders."

It was a raw district, that of which the young physician had been a resident for about a year. There were two principal points in the county—Ridgeford and Princeville. It was at the former town that Dr. Fairbanks had taken up his abode. The two places were only five miles apart, and the "safety zone," as it was called, encircled them for an area of about twenty miles. Thence to the south of Princeville was a mountainous stretch infested by rough moonshiners known as the Breckitt clan. The same condition prevailed south of Ridgeford, where Dan Rabbitt and his "Midnight Riders" held full sway. A broken ridge divided the two districts, the respective right and privileges of which were jealously guarded by either community.

For years a small but solidly built structure located just on the township line at a little settlement called Bryan had been the register's office of the county. All the official business of the district was carried on there, and there the county records were kept. One night the Breckitt riders, wiping out a fancied insult from the main residents of the place, "shot up" the settlement, set fire to what little there was of it, and every structure in Bryan was consumed except the register's office.

The state authorities were advised of this outrage and ordered a special election. The votes of the county were to be decided upon a new site for the register's office, with a view to locating it in a less isolated locality where its records could be protected. A central point was necessary, and the choice designated was between Ridgeford and Princeville.

Now, three days later, Dan walked into the office of Dr. Fairbanks with the words that begin our story. The favor which the young physician had done to which Dan alluded was an exigency call for attendance on a wounded friend for whom the officers were looking. He rode twenty miles amidst all the perils of a dark, stormy night, saved the life of the refugee, braved a stray shot from the watching Breckitts and won the undying gratitude of Dan.

"I thought I would come and tell you how things stood about the registry office," continued the young out-law leader.

"Why, the election has settled that matter," observed Dr. Fairbanks. "Not by a long shot!" dissented Dan vigorously. "An election isn't much in this county. Jed Breckitt realizes that, and we have accidentally learned, has sent for a house moving outfit to lug the register's office, records and all, over to Princeville."

"You amaze me!" exclaimed the young physician.

"Just let them get that building over to Princeville," continued Dan, "and we'll never get it back. I want you to quietly get about fifty of the residents here who can be depended on, ready to act with my crowd to-morrow night."

"There's old Doliver and his gal—especially the gal, bless her pretty eyes! Miss Dora—"

Old Jonathan Doliver had been the registrar of the county from time immemorial. His daughter Dora was his chief clerk.

"You people make a stand here," ordered Dan to the doctor and his party the next night. "If we need you we'll signal."

Lanterns were flashing, men moving about. They had been anticipated. There was the registry office, moved about fifty feet from its original site, being slowly and cautiously dragged along the top of the ridge.

"Charge 'em!" ordered Dan at once. "Leave the rest to me," and then, as his men drove into the unprepared Breckitts, Dan sprang to the curb, his bowie knife in hand, and began hacking at it.

"Look out—she's coming!" his strenuous voice thundered out.

The startled and amazed contingent led by Dr. Fairbanks witnessed a fearful spectacle, as down the steep hillside the heavy, clumsy structure came hurtling. It toppled from grade to grade, then three hundred feet below at the edge of the road it landed with a crash, a mere kindling wood wreck.

There were shots overhead, then they ceased, and then the voice of Dan Rabbitt was heard distinctly:

"We are two to one, you fellows. If it's a fight, come on—but no scrimming. The registry office is over on our side of the township line now, and we're ready to defend our rights."

The Breckitts made off sullenly. Dan came down with horses and drag. "Pick up the splinters, boys," he ordered. "Take special care of those iron record boxes. 'Doc,' and he lowered his tone to a chuckling whisper. "I reckon that sweet Doliver gal will keep her position a little longer. eh?—until you give her a life-long one in that new home of yours."

It must be a great relief to Germany to know what it will be required to pay for the war. Probably, too, the amount will deter any other nation from engaging in a similar pastime for at least 42 years.

Statistics show that there is at present one motorcar for every two families. But if reckless and drunken drivers speed up a bit in their efforts at depopulation there will in time be one car per family.

FRENCH PLANE FLIES UPWARD

Government Has Officially Accepted New Machine.

HELICOPTER IS THE NAME

Experts Predict That in Two Years the New Airplane Will Be Practical Reality—Is Constructed of Series of Horizontal Planes Revolving in Opposite Directions—Inventor Was Arrested by French Police as a Spy During the War.

The French aviation world, governmental and private, is deeply absorbed at the present time in the rapid development of the recently invented helicopter, the airplane which is designed to rise straight up from the ground.

The French government after a careful investigation by a commission of experts, has officially accepted the machine and has set aside a substantial sum of money for the immediate improvement of the invention.

The Marquis K. Paterna Pescara of Argentina is credited by some airplane experts with having actually proved its practicability, but several Frenchmen, among whom is M. L. Filippi, have since constructed helicopters with as much success as Pescara. Experimental work now is going on near Paris at an army aviation field.

Reality in Two Years.

At the Aero club of France, where the helicopter is the chief topic of conversation, experts predict that within two years the new airplane will be a practical reality.

Considerable surprise was expressed by these same experts that the United States government had apparently not taken up the new machine, inasmuch as it may materially affect sea warfare.

The helicopter, described simply without attempt at technicalities, is a machine constructed of a series of horizontal planes revolving in opposite directions. On the Pescara machine, a base similar to that of a low-slung automobile is used.

On this is built two series of horizontal planes, each series composed of ten planes. The usual airplane motor starts the planes and the effect is to make the machine rise straight from the ground.

In the experimental work a small gas bag has been used for safety purposes, but the work is so far along that these bags are being abandoned.

Arrested as Spy.

Pescara is conducting experiments in Barcelona, Spain, where the French army commission has spent several weeks in observation. His career has been romantic. Employed in experimental laboratories of the Italian government before the war, Pescara came to Paris soon after the beginning of the war and continued his work under army supervision. He was credited with hundreds of inventions, among them a dirigible which flew over the enemy lines and dropped bombs at stated intervals.

Suddenly, at the height of Pescara's success, the French police arrested him as a spy, and he was kept in prison for several months. The French ministry of war protested his innocence and obtained his release on condition that he be deported. He left for Spain and soon began his helicopter experiments.

DAUGHTER OF POET HAS UNIQUE WEDDING

This is a wedding picture, although the garments are not the conventional ones worn on such occasions. The girl in the burip wedding frock is Juanita Miller, daughter of the famous poet, Joaquin Miller. She won't change her name now that she is a wife, for the bridegroom also is a Miller, Juan Miller, an artist. The Indian wedding was celebrated in the Miller home in California.

Couldn't Fool Him.

Two neighbors were chatting over the fence when Mrs. Bailey passed, smiling, down the street. "Pretty woman, Mrs. Bailey!" remarked one. "Who was she?"

"I really have forgotten. Here's her little boy, I'll ask him. Frank, who was your mother before she was married?"

Frank regarded his questioner gravely. "She wasn't my mother before she was married," he severely replied. Life.

Same Old Story But a Good One

Mrs. Mahala Burns, Savanna, Mo., relates an experience, the like of which has happened in almost every neighborhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another attack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and in a short time I felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good. If you think it will induce some one to try the Vegetable Compound you may publish this letter."—Mrs. A. KELLER, Afton, Tenn.

Mrs. Mary Lister of Adrian, Mich., adds her testimony to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to carry women safely through the Change of Life. She says: "It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me. I got more, and I am now doing my housework. Your medicine is certainly woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. MARY LISTER, 608 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand passes through this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms.

Those mothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells are all symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the common ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

HIS OWN AND SOME OTHERS

Scenario Writer Had His Contribution Returned, With More Than Simple Interest.

Rex Beach, who has forsaken the profession of novelist for the more lucrative one of scenario writing, said at a Hollywood "tea":

"It is a common enough thing for a good man to dash off a scenario in a week or so and get $10,000 for it, but scenario writing, nevertheless, isn't all beer and skittles."

Mr. Beach chuckled.

"There's an English poet in our midst," he said, "who recently decided to make his debut in the film world. The other day as I was lunching with him the bell rang and the servant brought in a bulky envelope.

"The English poet examined the typescript in the envelope. Then he ground his teeth.

"This is what I call rubbing it in," he snarled. 'I sent the Star Film corporation four scenarios last week, and blamed if they haven't returned me mine.'"

Demonstrated on Spot.

Miss R. sends us the story of a clergyman who was attending the commencement exercises at a certain college for girls. The reverend gentleman said with greatunction to an interested group, "I approve of the higher education for women because of the refinement, the culture, the intellectuality of the young women, and which is so manifest today in all the exercises."

Just then a sweet girl graduate came rushing across the campus, waving her diploma frantically aloft and shouting, "Through, by gosh!" Boston Transcript.

Embarrassing.

"I wish you would send some one else to talk with this man about this deal," said the head salesman to the president.

"What's the idea? This is an important matter and you are supposed to take care of it."

"I know; but it will be terribly embarrassing to both of us. You see, this man is the former husband of my present wife."

Don't expect to make a good reputation by spending your time contradicting lies.

DAIRY POINTS

BUTTER SHIPPED IN SUMMER

Parcel Post Will Prove Entirely Satisfactory if Proper Conditions Are Maintained.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Parcel post shipments of butter are likely to be subjected to conditions, especially during the summer, which may cause deterioration and injure the quality of the butter. It is highly desirable, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, that every possible precaution be taken before shipment. Particularly is this true of farm-made butter, because conditions affecting its quality and condition usually cannot be controlled as easily as in creameries. Farm-made butter, however, should be marketed just as satisfactorily as creamery-made butter when it is properly made and prepared for shipment.

It is necessary to maintain proper conditions in the care of the milk and cream and the making of butter if a marketable product is to be produced. Too much importance, it is said, cannot be given to maintaining clean conditions in the stable and in other places where the milk, cream, or butter are produced or kept, for they absorb odors and spoil very quickly. It is important, too, that these products be kept in a cool place. High temperatures should always be avoided, as they produce a soft, oily condition of the butter which is undesirable.

In manufacturing butter on the farm or in a factory the buttermilk must be removed and washed out, and the proper amount of salt must be incorporated evenly. Frequently parcel post shipments of farm butter are unsatisfactory to customers because proper methods were not used in making it, and the quality and condition of the butter thereby injured before it was shipped. For the satisfaction of customers it is important that a uniform quality of butter be produced.

Methods used in preparing butter for parcel post shipping depend largely upon the local conditions and style of package used. To insure delivery in the best possible state, butter, after being packed, printed and placed in cartons, should be chilled or hardened thoroughly before it is shipped.

One of the most satisfactory ways of preparing butter for shipment is in regular one-pound prints, the standard print measuring 2½ by 2½ by 4½ inches. Every pound print should be neatly wrapped in regular butter parchment or paper. A second thickness of such paper has been found to add materially to the carrying possibility of the butter. Waxed paper may be used for the second wrapping. As a further protection to the print, it should be placed in heavy manila paraffin cartons, which may be obtained from folding paper-box companies, either plain or printed as a stock carton or with a special private brand.

Corrugated fiber-board shipping containers of various sizes may be obtained for shipping one-pound prints of butter. These boxes or containers practically insulate the butter and furnish such protection against heat. Further protection may be obtained by wrapping the container in stout wrapping paper. The whole should be tied securely with a strong cord. In tying the twine it should be drawn tightly around the package so as to insure its proper carriage.

Some persons ship butter by parcel post in improvised or home-made containers. Clean, discarded, corrugated paperboard cartons are obtained from the grocer or other merchant at small cost or frequently without any cost at all. It is possible to cut a piece of paper board in such shape and size that when it is folded it will form a satisfactory carton.

Like Feeding Cows in Dark.

Wisconsin Farmer Praises Cow-Testing Association as Guide-Board to Better Dairying.

"When I bought my farm two years ago there was a herd of scrub cows on it," writes a Wisconsin farmer to a field agent of the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture. "I joined the cow-testing association, and soon found that my scrub cows were a failure, so I disposed of them and bought some purebred and grade Holstein cows. The cow-testing association is a guide-board on the way to better dairying and a big saving in feeds, as one can feed so much better advantage where the production is known. Trying to feed without records of your cows is like feeding in the dark."

Going It Blind.

Any farmer who miks a cow without testing both yield and quality is like a sailor who tries to steer his ship into port without chart, rudder or compass.

Feed Easily Handled.

With a silo for summer feeding, the dairyman always has an abundant supply of feed that is easily handled.

Gets His Check Monthly.

The dairy farmer gets his check every month.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement.

Modest Declaration.

"You have served your country a great many years."

"I have," admitted Senator Sorghum.

"Your people have absolute confidence in you?"

"I won't say that they always have absolute confidence. But it has always happened that they'd rather take a chance on me than they would on the other fellow."

Metal and Paper Money.

Only gold coins are worth their face value by reason of the gold in them at the world rate of $20.67 an ounce. Silver and other coins do not have metal in them that equals their face value. Their value is depreciated by an over issue of paper currency, as has generally occurred in European countries, and by the demand for American dollars in bill of exchange to pay for American exports which have been greatly in excess of American imports. Under more normal conditions the demand for bills of exchange in America and other countries about balance, and keep most issues of money at a parity.

The Limit of Devotion.

"They seem to get along perfectly."

"Yes. Even when they play poker he doesn't object to the way she plays her hands."

Men are seldom as good as they pretend to be or as bad as they are said to be.

Don't Go From Bad to Worse!

Are you always weak, miserable and half-sick? Then it's time you found out what is wrong. Kidney weakness causes much suffering from backache, lameness, stiffness and rheumatic pains, and if neglected brings danger of serious troubles—dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease. Don't delay. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Virginia Case

Mrs. Walker, 707 Pennington St., Alexandria, Va., says: "A cold settled in my kidneys. I had such pains I could hardly get up. I caught my breath sometimes. When I bent it was hard to get up. ## Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

STATE AND PENINSULA

Bids for the erection of a new library to cost $500,000 will be opened in Wilmington August 15.

The shipment of watermelons in car load lots from Seaford began Saturday and this week is expected to be a big one.

Grangers from all parts of lower Delaware will meet at Oak Orchard August 19, when National Grange officers will speak.

Because of a cut of $197,000 in the appropriation to the Wilmington schools by City Council, the Board of Education claims it will be greatly hampered.

Thomas Bush, aged 17, of Wilmington, who saved two persons from drowning in less than a month, is being recommended for a Carnegie medal.

A. R. Saylor, for 21 years the editor and publisher of the Wilmington Labor Herald, has retired and two sons, John C. and Charles P. Saylor, will continue the paper.

Governor Denney at Dover, has announced the appointment of John P. LeFevre, of Dover, as lieutenant-colonel of the First Regiment, National Guard of Delaware.

Newspaper editors of the State will be the guests of the State Department of Education at a dinner to be given at the Belhaven Hotel, Rehoboth, to-day, Aug. 13th. The Federal Commissioner of Education, Dr. John J. Tigert, is expected to be present.

Following a conference by Adjutant General Ellison and Lieutenant-Governor Bush next Friday was announced as Governor's Day in Camp Chandler. Major Bush is acting as Governor of Delaware, Governor Denney being in France with a delegation of American Legion representatives, and will review the regiment.

The Laurel-Bethel camp-meeting, the largest and one of the oldest camps on the peninsula, opened Sunday for four weeks. Professor Walter E. Vom Brush and wife, of Chicago, are in charge of the music, and Rev. W. W. Banks, of Williamsport, Pa., preached to large crowds Sunday morning and evening. Rev. W. Osbourne Bennett is in charge of the camp.

TO AVERT SHORTAGE

Definite steps to avert a possible coal shortage in the State during the winter months will be taken at the quarterly meeting of the Delaware State Coal Club, to be held at Rehoboth on August 26.

The admittedly serious condition that confronts the coal men of the state will be discussed at length at the Rehoboth meeting. Coal dealers this week confirmed the report that unless some plan of action is decided upon, conditions during the coming winter are likely to be worse than those of last year.

The employment situation has had a sharp effect on the coal situation. Despite the fact that coal dealers have not increased their prices this summer, following the custom of years standing, sales have been at low ebb. An increase in prices will go into effect on September 1 which will make it more difficult for the public to purchase its winter supply of coal.

An improvement in business and employment conditions in the early fall would result in an abnormal demand for coal here. A factor in this connection is the falling off in production at the mines which, during the past few months, has reached serious proportions. These matters will be given full consideration at the quarterly meeting and an attempt will be made to reach an equitable solution.

Oppose Daylight Saving

At a meeting of the executive committee of the State Federation of Farm Bureau in Dover, Monday afternoon, various topics were discussed of interest to the farmers including the plan to pool fertilizer orders, and also to secure fodder twine at the best advantage. The committee placed itself on record unanimously, as opposing the daylight-saving time, as adopted in some sections of Delaware, especially the northern part of the State around the city of Wilmington, where the daylight-saving time is in effect. Farmers throughout the State bitterly opposed the daylight-saving when it was in effect during the war.

DELAWARE NEEDS TEACHERS

A scholarship of $150 a year, for the next two years, is offered by the Delaware State Board of Education to young women who wish to prepare to teach in the elementary schools of Delaware. An applicant must be a graduate of a four-year high school. Applications are to be sent to H. V. Holloway, State Superintendent of public instruction, Dover, accompanied by a health certificate which gives record of eyes, ears, throat and heart, a letter from the principal of her high school, and the names of two persons to whom she may refer, as to her character and personality.

Dean Robinson has been collecting statements of reasons why Delaware girls should elect this course and has prepared the following:

"Why prepare to teach in the elementary schools of Delaware?"

"1. Because of the general cultural value of the subject matter to be acquired."

"2. Because the salaries of teachers are being increased, initial salary $850 to $1000."

"3. Because this training is of inestimable value in any calling upon which you may enter whether teaching business or homemaking."

"4. Because college life is an invaluable experience for the friendships formed, the habits gained, and its training for life's leisure as well as life's toil."

"5. Because the opportunity to receive this training is being offered at the Women's College, University of Delaware without tuition and with a scholarship of $150 a year which is applied upon the cost of board."

"6. Because Delaware needs teachers as never before and the responsibility for one of these vacant places is yours."

Delaware's Deposits

According to bank statements showing the condition of the financial institutions of the State on June 30, this year, which have been analyzed by George I. Medill, State Bank Commissioner, there are 76,449 savings accounts in Delaware State banking institutions, with total deposits of $27,973,520, and 50,892 checking accounts with total deposits of $32,980,718, a grand total of $60,954,238.

The statements also show a total of $6,972,327 invested in United States government securities, $3,654,145 in State, county and municipal bonds, $1,151,727 in loans secured by farm land and $3,226,924 in loans secured by other real estate.

Mr. Medill will represent Delaware at the annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State banking institutions to be held in Philadelphia, August 3, 4 and 5, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. He will discuss Delaware's new bank legislation enacted by the last General Assembly.

Dean Rich Resigns

Following the close of the Summer School for Teachers, at the University of Delaware, the most successful in the history of the institution, comes the announcement of the resignation of Miss Mary E. Rich, Dean of Women. This is a distinct blow to the University and to educational advance throughout the State. Dean Rich presented her resignation to President Hulihan on last Thursday and left Thursday for New York. She will spend her vacation in the Catskill and in the fall will take up graduate work in Education at Teachers' College, Columbia University.

Miss Rich was called to the Women's College at its opening as Professor of Education seven years ago and since that time her name and influence has been linked with every educational movement in the State.

Cause of Appendicitis

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

Hunger, The Best Sauce

Sauce is used to create an appetite or relish for the food. The right way is to look to your digestion. When you have good digestion you are certain to relish your food. Chamberlain's Tablets improve the digestion, create a healthy appetite and cause a gentle movement of the bowels.
